POST-OFFICE,

Waſhington, Jan. 11, 1801.

WHEREAS ſundry letters lately ſent to and from this office, particularly two from the Poſtmaſter General, ſealed with his official ſeal, one for Albany, New-York; and the other for Bucks Town, Maine; have been broken open before they were received by the perſons to whom they were directed And other letters of importance from officers of government, and from individuals, have been ſuppreſſed and in ſome inſtances withheld or delayed in ſuch manner as to induce a belief of premeditated and fraudulent deſign. And as among the other injurious conſequences of ſuch atrocious conduct the innocent and the guilty are, in a ſtate of uncertainty, alike ſubject to ſuſpicion and cenſure, I therefore (being implicated with others) will pay a reward of one hundred dollars for information which ſhall convict any perſon or perſons of any of the above mentioned offences, and two hundred dollars in each caſe of the ſaid letters of the Poſtmaſter General.
