Kentuckey,
Tenneffe—being 6 ftates.

Pennfylvania—the Senate federal, and the Houfe of Reprefentatives republican.

Mark the change!

Now—Only the legiflatures of the following ftates are federal, viz.

New-Hampfhire,
Connecticut,
Maffachufetts,
Delaware—being 4 ftates.

While the Legiflatures of the following ftates are republican, viz.

Rhode-Ifland,
Vermont,
New-York,
New-Jerfey,
Pennfylvania,
Maryland,
Virginia,
North-Carolina,
South-Carolina,
Georgia,
Kentuckey,
Tenneffee—being 12 ftates.

If the numbers of the Republican ftates be compared with thofe of the Federal ftates, it will appear that the former conftitute above three fourths of the whole.

When we confider the great changes which have lately taken place in the four ftates, as yet federal; when we confider that in New-Hampfhire, Maffachufetts, and Delaware, but a trifling majority of the total votes given at their laft elections were on the federal fide; we may confidently infer that the continued operation of the great political principles, which in other parts of the union have overcome all obftacles, will foon affimilate thefe ftates to the political fentiments of the others.

The Chief Magiftrate has been condemned for infractions of the conftitution and laws, and for violations of the national feelings and wifhes. Can there exift a more conclufive refutation of thefe charges than that furnifhed by the above ftatement? Have the republicans, they who exclufively fupport the adminiftration of the federal government—have they loft ground in a fingle ftate? Have they not, on the contrary, in the fhort period of one year, gained five ftates? And even when they have not fucceeded, is not every election an evidence of their increafing ftrength?—Ceafe then, ye who refpect truth, to affirm that the Prefident is on one fide, and the nation on the other. He who came to power as the man of the people, will not ceafe to remain fo while his actions demonftrate the exiftence of a mind prompt to difcern, and a heart warm in the purfuit of whatever promotes the public good.

What has he done?

1. The chief of a republican government, he has declared himfelf a genuine republican.

2. He has introduced economy into the public expenditure.

3. He has equalized in fome degree the diftribution of offices, by excluding thofe unfit for the places they hold; and by raifing to the firft offices under the government men, whofe talents are refpected by their friends, and dreaded by their enemies.

4. He has avowed himfelf the friend of peace with all mankind, and has practifed what he avowed.

5. And what, perhaps, more redounds to his honor than the fum of all that he has done, he has omitted to do any one thing which the conftitution or laws of his country did not authorife and direct.

In a word, under the prefent change in our political affairs, the nation is united and happy.

That it may continue united and happy muft depend on the wifdom of the legiflative body.

However fecure our rights may be under the prefent adminiftration of our government, every enlightened republican muft know, that a large fhare of our political happinefs is not duly protected againft the invafion of rulers inimical to liberty. The late change, which fecures whatever is dear to freedom, may, by fome fortuitous events, however at prefent unlooked for, be exchanged for a relapfe of our government into all its old, incorporated with new errors.

Now, then, is the period; for men who have wifdom to plan, and vigor to atchieve, new fecurities for the enjoyment of peace and liberty. Executive power has been, and it may be again abufed. The liberty of the prefs has been invaded. The rights of foreigners have been trampled upon. For thefe leading evils let correctives be enacted. On thefe points there can be no divifion among republicans—On leffer points there may exift a contrariety of opinion. Still it becomes the legiflature calmly to difcufs whatever refpects the permanent protection of our rights, and to adopt whatever its beft judgment recommends.

It is fincerely to be hoped that the federal part of the legiflature, feeing its inability to oppofe with effect, will magnanimoufly co-operate in the promotion of meafures, which, founded exclufively on a regard to the public good, in their unanimous adoption, may be confidered as fo many evidences of our univerfal agreement in, and pledges for the duration of, certain great political principles.

Should this wife policy actuate them, the nation will thank them. There is a difpofition in the republicans to forget paft divifions; and to co-operate harmonioufly with all defcriptions of citizens, who fhall abandon perfonal and party views, and unite with fincerity in advancing the national interefts.

During the enfuing feffion of the Federal Legiflature, the firft attention will be paid by the Editor to whatever refpects the proceedings of the government. The Debates will be given in detail, and every public Document of an interefting nature. —

Died, on the 18th inftant. at Silver-Bluff, Edgefield diftrict, aged 35 years, the Honorable Ephraim Ramsay, one of the Affociate Judges of South-Carolina.

In announcing the death of this excellent and amiable man, there is little fear of adding infult to the facred memory of the dead, or of doing violence to the dignity of grief by an unqualified praife.—Elevated by the voice of his country, to one of its moft important offices, he brought to his tafk a mind richly ftored; a difcernment unufually prompt; an integrity, that could not be corrupted; an independence and firmnefs of principle, that could not be fhaken. On queftions of general policy, and on fubjects, to the underftanding of which judgment and information are neceffary, his views were enlightened and liberal; and they were detailed by an eloquence, animated, yet chafte and precife.—In his family, his conduct was marked by tendernefs and indulgence—'twas fuch as exhibited that affection, which domeftic happinefs demands, and that fatisfaction, which only its innocence can infpire. As a friend and companion, his intimates will long remember and refpect that generofity, which had full poffeffion of his heart, that intelligence, which pervaded his converfation; and that politenefs, which graced his manners. By his death, we are left to regret knowledge, that is extinguifhed, and talents that are buried in oblivion—It is our portion to fympathife with affection, that is widowed; and to pity innocence that is unprotected.

Captain Woods of the fhip Commerce, who arrived at this port yefterday in 20 days from Guadaloupe, informs us that he was embargoed there 20 days in confequence of an infurrection on the part of the negroes, headed by general Pelage; that the infurgents feized the perfon of general La Croffe, and put him on board a Danifh fhip for Copenhagen; and that the veffel was captured by the Englifh frigate Tamar, and carried into Martinique.

MAGLOIRE PELAGE,

Chief of Brigade, Commander in Chief of the armed force of Guadaloupe and its dependencies, And the Civil Commiffaries—To all the citizens of the United States of America at prefent in the colony.

Worthy and dear Allies,

The events that have juft happened, obliged us to lay an Embargo on all your veffels, as well as on others which were found in our ports. This meafure was indifpenfable; but we haften to announce to you that you are at liberty from this day to clear out your veffels.

If an hindrance of a few days has been prejudicial to your intereft, on the other hand you will not depart without carrying along with you the conviction that we have been devoted to the horrors of an inteftine diffention, and that tranquility has been fpeedily reftored. You have witneffed the efforts we have made to attain the end; you have feen how they have been feconded.

Citizens, children of a republic neceffarily allied to the French republic, Guadaloupe will remain faithful to the metropolis; fhe wifhes to preferve the relations of friendfhip and of commerce fo happily re-eftablifhed between the two nations by that treaty, the obfervance of which fhall ever be facred to us.

Thefe intentions have been proved to you by the fafety and regards which you have enjoyed amidft the crifis which we have juft experienced. Accept therewith our folemn affurances; and be pleafed to tranfmit the fame to your fellow citizens at the feveral ports of your refpective deftinations. Tell them that far from relinquifhing the connection which unites us to each other, they ought to ftrenghten it ftill more; that the meafures taken by the adminiftration, the economy and the order adopted for the employment of the rich productions of this colony, warrant more than ever to our worthy allies the great advantages they have fo conftantly found thereby and will cement the union and the confidence which arifes from the profperity of all.
