quest[illegible] from the citizens of America. HUME.

MANUFACTURING COMPANY OF THE CITY OF WASHINGTON.

At a meeting of the Directors, the following Resolutions were passed:

" Resolved, As the sense of this Board, that the success of this institution altogether depends upon the punctual payment of the instalments due and hereafter becoming due.

Resolved, That the President be requested to lay before the public a statement, under his signature, of the amount of subscriptions that has been received, and the disbursements that have been made, together with a general view of the state of the institution; and earnestly to call upon the subscribers to pay their instalments

Resolved, That the Treasurer, immediately after such publication, wait on the subscribers to request their payment of the instalments due.

In obedience to the forgoing resolutions, I have hereunto annexed a statement of the amount of monies received from the subscribers to the Manufacturing Company, and expended in procuring machinery and setting it partially to work.

The directors are anxious to be enabled to extend the machinery, so as to justify the renting a proper house for the works, and procuring manufacturers of skill and character to conduct the different branches; but with the small means now under their control, it will occur to every subscriber that it would be neither prudent or proper in the Directors, to incur expence without a prospect of that remuneration to the Stockholders which a more extensive capital would most probably secure, because the expense of conducting the establishment on a small scale would be greater in proportion than on a larger.

From a full persuasion that the subscribers to the institution were actuated by a desire of promoting this infant manufactory, and that they will persevere to the extent subscribed to promote its success, the Directors feel a confident reliance upon them in paying the amount of their subscriptions to the Treasurer of the Institution.

By request of the Board,
ROBERT BRENT, Pres't.
November 20th, 1809.

The Vermont Reporter says—" It is stated, that on an investigation of the officers of the Vermont Banks, it was found, that in September last there had been put in circulation upwards of 760,000 dollars, and that more than 404,000 dollars now remained unredeemed.—A bill has been brought into the Legislature, to collect debts due the bank in a very summary way, by issuing Extents against the delinquent's person and property, in three days after the notes become due!—It is also said, the Legislature have it in contemplation to create funds for the bank, by a land tax of 3 cents per acre, to be paid in specie or Vermont bills.

" We are likewise informed, that Messrs. Chapin and Campbell, Directors, and Campbell, the Cashier of the Westminster branch have been removed."

We have been informed from the best authority, that the British Packet now undergoing repairs here, is ordered to sail as soon as possible to carry out Mr. Oakely, who is bearer of important dispatches from Mr. Jackson. It is supposed the Packet cannot be got ready for sea before Thursday or Friday next.

Mr. Jackson intends to spend the winter in this city, but will not, it is said, leave Washington till after the meeting of Congress.

THOMAS JEFFERSON.

Talents he had, in nature's skill design'd,
To rule the worlds of action and of mind;—
Talents the subtle line of right to draw,
And pond'ring Senates found his judgment law.
In vain fell envy gathers all her bands,
In vain delusion lifts a thousand hands,
Far beyond reach his measures rise sublime,
Their proof experience, and their champion time.

His was the fortune, in a dangerous day,
To lead a youthful nation on its way:
A pamper'd nation, proud, disdaining rule,
As yet untutor'd in misfortune's school,
Mad with division—and ambition's eye,
Fiery and restless, watch'd its moment nigh.
His was the GLORY, slander'd and revil'd,
Jeer'd as he spoke, and thwarted as he toil'd,
While war assum'd its last and mightiest forms,
Upright and firm to walk between the storms.

Stand forth, reviler! and assert the claim
To weigh his wisdom and denounce his fame.
Art thou superior? is it thine to rear
A nation's standard in its awful sphere?
Hast thou a mind all adequate and vast,
To pierce the future, comprehend the past,
View every motive, give each cause its weight,
And trace effect abroad from state to state?
Art thou the sage to guard through every hour,
The bounds of right from fraudulence and power?
To rise serene, while thunders round are hurl'd,
And stand among the mighty of the world?

He to no science, to no art confin'd,
Prolong'd his journey o'er the realms of mind,
Through all their scenery eager still to rove,
And pluck a laurel forth from every grove.
Fame, with a voice of exultation sweet,
Salutes pale learning in his cool retreat;
On the great statesman showers her honors down,
Clad in a glory brighter than renown;
But he, the sage, whose intellectual reach
Pervades both regions and excels in each;
The son of science, and the sire of state—
Reviler! say, is not that mortal great?
Millions pronounce him worthy of their praise—
Child! is it thine to rob him of his bays?

By slander shadow'd, and assail'd by hate,
O sacred virtue! this must be thy fate,
Till human merit has on earth reward,
And God's right arm of thunder for its guard!
But shall the muse, the noble muse, combine,
Warm every thought, and polish every line,
To force bright truth for kinder realms to fly,
And bid young genius bow him down and die?

Is there no glory for the living great!
No ray to cheer the gath'ring gloom of fate!
Alone in church yards must the laurel bloom,
Grow but on graves and darken round the tomb!

There is a glory for the living great?
There is a ray to gild the eve of fate—
There is a wreath with hoary age shall grow,
Defy the storm, and thicken round his brow!
There is a triumph prouder still than fame;
The great man's triumph—human nature's shame;
The foes, the slanders, that assail his seat,
The hosts of envy storming round his feet.

British amity!—We were last evening favored with a Halifax paper of October 24. which gives the intelligence of the capture of the American ship Susquehanna, captain Brown, from Baltimore, bound to Tonningen. She was taken by his Britannic majesty's schooner Thistle, and carried into Halifax. The gentleman who handed us the paper states, that three other vessels from Baltimore for Tonningen, were bound into Halifax, as prizes, when he was coming out.—He could not learn their names. There are several notifications in the Halifax paper, for the distribution of prize money on vessels condemned.

Yesterday arrived the sloop Phœbe, capt. Turley, 37 days from Carthagena, who informs that markets were dull and they were overstocked with English manufactures—that the port of Carthagena was opened for 9 months for neutrals with the prohibition of Dry Goods and spirituous Liquors.

The Spanish throughout South America, it was said, were ripe for a revolution—they say they will not submit to any other crowned head than Ferdinand the 7th; him they appear willing should be their prince, should he once more regain the Spanish throne, but should he fail, then they are clear for setting up a Republican form of Government; independant of any European Junta or other power. The province of Quito, it was said had already set up an independent Government and thrown off all obedience to the Spanish government. To quell the spirit of insurrection, so called, troops were marching from the other Spanish provinces against the inhabitants of Quito, who had already chosen their junta and declared themselves a free and independant people.

Guernsey, Oct. 4—A vessel has arrived here, which left Cherbourg on Friday last

The letters by her inform us, that accounts had reached that place from Paris which leave no doubt that the emperor Napoleon was very ill at his palace of Schoenbrun. His disorder is a brain fever, brought on by excessive fatigue in his personal attention to every branch of his army. Most certain it is, that two physicians and two surgeons suddenly left Paris last week to attend him They proceeded on their journey with extraordinary speed.

(CIRCULAR.)

" Helsingburgh, Sept. 12.

" The Minister for Foreign Affairs has the honor, in obedience to his majesty's most gracious command, to communicate the following intelligence:

" The Imperial French Brigadier General Landras, Governor of Stralsund, has declared to the ambassadors of his royal majesty destined for the French court, on their arrival at Stralsund, that through the French general Libbert, in Stettin, he has received orders from the prince of Neufchatel, in which he informs him, that the commercial intercourse between Pomerania and Sweden is to be at an end, and that the communication between the two countries is to be regulated in the following manner:

" That the passage of the packets between Stralsund and Ystadt for couriers and letters shall alone remain open; and that the French consuls in the ports of the Baltic, have, according to the statement of general Landras received similar orders.

" His royal majesty's charge d'affairs in Hamburgh has reported, under the date of the 26th of last month, that in consequence of his intercession the Senator Bourienne, Imperial French Minister in the Circle of Lower Saxony, had taken upon himself to enquire with regard to the point, " how far the Swedish convoy which arrived off Wismar, under the orders of major Wahlstedt, would be allowed to take cargoes on board at that place, and to clear out for Swedish ports." M. Bourienne had not received any answer from his imperial majesty, but expected it on the 27th or 28th of last month, if his majesty's orders could be immediately dispatched "

COUNTERFEITS.

THERE has lately appeared in circulation a Counterfeit Five Dollar Note of the Hagerstown Bank; the President's name, and the Number and the filling up in the body of the Note is badly done; the paper is very thin, and has no mixture of red in it, as is in the genuine paper, and the Letters in the Printing, and the Ink will be found on examination to be much inferior to the real Notes; the letter M in the word Maryland is badly done, the middle stroke extending about half as low only as the outer strokes.
