PATENT THRESHING MACHINE.

THE subscriber having invented a machine (for which he has obtained a patent) for threshing all kinds of grain, particularly wheat and those kinds of grain most difficult to be separated from straw, stem or chaff, takes the liberty of recommending the same to his fellow citizens as worthy their attention. The subscriber is well aware that the public attention has often been solicited to inventions for threshing wheat, and it has been lamented that those inventions have often fallen short of the desired effect, but from the actual experiment which has been made on the one now offered to the public, the Inventor is emboldened to recommend it in terms of confidence and a well grounded expectation of its becoming of great profit and utility both to the farmer and manufacturer. This machine is constructed upon entire new principles, its operation is by flails, encircled by a cylinder, moved by friction wheels, and can with ease be regulated so that no straw shall pass off before the grain is entirely threshed out of it. It is worked by two horses, and so geared that their speed will not exceed the rate of three miles per hour and the draught moderate; nor does it require more than two persons to attend it. The straw is discharged at one part and the wheat at another, perfectly screened and fanned ready for market: the shrivelled wheat, cockles, &c. are deposited by themselves and the chaff also, so that no mixture takes place.—This machine will thresh at the rate of, from fifteen to twenty bushels per hour, is not subject, if properly built, to get out of repair, and if kept under cover will last many years. The wheat prepared for market by this machine is worth to the manufacturer considerably more than that got out in the usual mode of treading, and the cost of the machine will not exceed from one hundred and fifty to two hundred dollars.

The subscriber will grant permits to use his threshing machine and furnish a drawing or written description by which it can be executed for fifty dollars each, or any person can view the one he has erected at his mills near Dumfries, Virginia, so as to enable them to erect one from it. The subjoined certificates being from gentlemen whose good understandings and fixed habits entitle them to respect, and some of whom being persons of scientific knowledge, he hopes will be sufficient to recommend his machine to public use; he will also contract for the privilege of using his machine in any particular state.

Letters post paid directed to him at Dumfries, Virginia, will be duly attended to.

JAMES DENEALE, Jun.
Dumfries, Dec. 3, 1804.

Dumfries, 30 Oct. 1804.

WE, the underwritten, inhabitants of the town of Dumfries and its vicinity, having frequently attended experiments made with a machine invented by Mr James Deneale, of the Quantico Mills, near this place, for the purpose of threshing out wheat, have no hesitation in giving our united testimony in support of the usefulness which will result to the community from this excellent invention As Mr Deneale is about to apply to the proper authority for a patent when the construction will be generally diffused, we deem it unnecessary to add more on the subject.

Occoquan, 30th Oct. 1804.

BEING called on by James Deneale, of Dumfries, in the state of Virginia, to view a Threshing Machine of his invention, and executed by himself, for which he is about to obtain a patent, I waited on him, but went with prejudice against all threshing machines heretofore invented, having never seen or heard of one that answered a good purpose, and hardly thought it likely that this could be much superior to those which had preceded it; but contrary to my expectation, it did its work perfectly, leaving not a grain of wheat in the heads, nor even any chaff on the grains, it made no difference whether the wheat (in the straw) was put into the machine in a straight or in a tangled state, it delivered the straw well, and did not appear difficult to manage, nor so complicated as to be hard to keep in repair: it threshed, while I stood by, nine dozen sheaves of wheat, (such as two dozen in common seasons would have made a bushel) in sixteen minutes, so that I have no doubt it will thresh fifteen to eighteen bushels an hour with two horses to draw it, and two hands to attend it with much ease to the hands and horses with the assistance of a common Dutch fan placed under the machine, which would be turned with and by the machine, the wheat might be rendered nearly fit for market, with only the expence of two hands and two horses working at leisure at the rate abovementioned of fifteen to eighteen bushels an hour, clear from all dirt or filth of any kind. And as most Millers would find it their interest to give 3d to 6d per bushel more for wheat got out in this way than that got out in the ridiculous mode of treading with horses on the dirt; I can with confidence, and on the principle of doing to others as I should wish others to do to me recommend this machine to all considerable farmers as worthy their most serious attention and adoption. Seeing the farmers generally in this state do not get for their wheat within 6d. to 1s. per bushel of what the northern farmers get at market, I attribute the cause to the difference in management only.
