FRANKFORT, Aug. 27.

We learn from Darmstadt, that Baron Barkhousen the first minister of the landgrave has set out for Ratisbon, to obtain from the two guarantying powers, France and Russia, the authorisation of receiving the indemnities allotted to this prince. Baron of Edelsheim, first minister of the margrave of Baden went to Ratisbon for the same purpose. Deputies from Bamberg, Wurtzburg, from the House of Nassau, &c. have arrived there, intrusted with full powers from their constituents, to watch over their respective concerns with the Diet.

MANHEIM, Aug. 27.

There have arrived here two couriers with very important dispatches. The first is the bearer of an order to all Bavarian troops, now in the Palatinate, to cause all those that are absent on furlough, to join their corps again in 24 hours, and be ready to march. By the second, these troops have received the summons of setting off without any delay for Wurtzburg. They are commanded by the Prince of Yzenburg. The garrison of Heidelberg are to set off to day, and that of Manheim the day after to-morrow.

The whole of the elector's troops has begun to march in several directions. General [illegible] will head the body of the army charged with occupying the imperial towns and ecclesiastical countries of Suabia, to supply the place of General Dixon who has taken the command of general Bartels.

MUNICH, Aug. 22.

It is asserted, that the court of Vienna has applied to the French government and to the court of Berlin and Petersburg, to obtain for the grand duke of Tuscany greater indemnities than those granted him by the convention of Paris. The declaration has been made to all the states of Germany that form a part of the deputation of the empire.

PROCLAMATION.

The Captain General of Guadaloupe and its dependencies, to the army of Guadaloupe and to the inhabitants of the colony.

Death has just snatched from us general Richepanse, he who had preserved the colony of Guadaloupe from the rebels, and added new laurels to those which he had gathered on the field of Hoehenlinden: the brave men whom he had commanded, and whom he had uniformly led to victory, regret in him a friend, who had ever given them an example of every military virtue, while the inhabitants of this colony, who have so long suffered under the system of usurpation will weep for him, who would have restored them to happiness and prosperity.

Recalled by the First Consul to the duties of captain general of Guadaloupe, I was more than satisfied with the reparation made to the legitimate authority, and I was about resigning my authority into the hands of general Richepanse, when death deprived us of him.

In this painful situation, and consulting only my duties, I have determined to retain the authority confided to me by the First Consul. With the aid of the army I feel certain of fulfilling all his intentions, and of preserving the peace of the colony, which is no longer in a state of seige.

Citizen Lescallier will perform all the duties of Colonial Prefect, conformably to the decree of 26 Germinal, year 9, and will maintain order in all parts of the administration. Thus, let all the citizens rest assured, that the valour of the army will secure to them repose and tranquility. A wise organization will repair the ravages of that war to which our success has put an end; for myself, I shall be satisfied, if I can unite all minds and all hearts, in cherishing the principles of the government delegated to me.

LA CROSSE.

Discourse pronounced by General La Crosse, at the tomb of the general in chief RICHEPANSE, translated from the official papers of Guadaloupe.

Generals, Commanders, Officers and soldiers,

This day is to all of us a day of sorrow. He who had constantly conducted you to victory, general Richapanse,—is no more! but his actions, his courage, and his zeal for the glory of the Republic, will make him live eternally in the heart of every Frenchman.

You, who have followed him to the field of honour, who have partaken his dangers, you have seen him at Hoehenlinden pierce the enemies' batallions, uniting the coolness of reflection with the impetuosity of courage, and by the boldest manœuvres gain and partake with you one of the most brilliant portions of the glory of that memorable day.

Even with deeds like these he was not satisfied, but came with you to conquer the colony of Guadaloupe, to restore it to the dominion of France, and to avenge on the audacious rebels the [illegible] authority they had despised. It is by his talents and your bravery that he has tranquilized Guadaloupe, and restored to the wretched inhabitants the hope of regaining their antient prosperity.

Honor'd with the confidence of the First Consul, I shall find in fulfilling my duties as captain general the double satisfaction of rendering justice to your military virtues, your love of discipline, and at the same time of making you witnesses of my zeal for the public good.

LA CROSSE.

The Merchants of Petersburg, Verginia, to the number of 55, have presented the following Address to Dr. Shore lately appointed Collector of that port.

Petersburg, 16th October, 1082.

DOCTOR JOHN SHORE.

SIR,

We, your fellow-citizens, merchants and owners of vessels, in the town of Petersburg, from a firm conviction, that our government consults the true interests of the people, and takes for its guide their will, are induced to afford it every support which an expression of our sentiments can convey. Actuated by this motive, we deem it a duty to remove the erroneous impressions, which an address from some respectable merchants to the late collector, and his answer, are calculated to produce. We declare our highest confidence in the conduct of the executive, and our approbation of the appointment of yourself to the office of collector for this port. When we were told that colonel Page was to be the successor of colonel Heth, we were pleased with a character so exalted by public and private virtues, and regretted his non-acceptance; this regret, however, was removed by the subsequent appointment of yourself. We therefore cordially congratulate you on your acceptance of the office; and from a knowledge of your deportment in society, we anticipate with pleasure, that, whilst every official act will be marked with ability and accuracy, proper respect will be paid to the principles of decorum and civility.

Wishing you health and happiness, we are respectfully, your sincere friends.

Petersburg, October 16th, 1802.

GENTLEMEN,

The sentiments which you have been pleased to express, in approbation of my appointment to the office of collector for this port, as contained in your friendly communication of this day, have impressed me with great sensibility.

The declaration of your high confidence in the conduct of the executive, under a firm conviction, that, in the administration of our government the true interests and will of the people are alone consulted, is a full exposition of the honorable motives, by which you are actuated. A support, derived from such conviction, cannot fail to produce the happiest effect.

In the execution of the important trust confided to me, it shall be my care, by every disposition to accommodate, and by a diligent attention to the duties of my office, to obviate any interruption to the public business.

Your kind wishes, I beg leave to reciprocate, and tender you the high respect and regard, with which I am,

Gentlemen,

Your friend and fellow citizen,

JOHN SHORE.
