We notice that by a new arrangement, the City of Richmond in Virginia has been divided into three wards, denominated Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe.

A correspondent, who expresses pleasure on reading in a late Palladium, Dr. Jenner had received "a valuable diamond ring from the Empress Russia," conceives that the American public would be still more gratified to hear, that the celebrated Jenner lately sent Dr. Waterhouse a silver box, of exquisite workmanship, inlaid with gold, and inscribed thus, "Edward Jenner to Benjamin Waterhouse," and superscribed by an intimate friend in these words, "From the Jenner of the Old, to the Jenner of the New World."

Washington, Jan. 18, 1803.

"Sir—soon after the date of my letter to you of December 10, the memorial of the senate and house of representatives of Kentucky, to the president of the U. States and the senate and house of representatives of congress, came to hand. In that letter I informed you that we had reason to believe that the suspension of the right to deposit at New Orleans, was an act merely of the Intendant, unauthorised by his government; that immediately on information of it we had taken measures to have it rectified, and that we had been seconded in these by the cordial interposition of the minister of his catholic majesty, residing here. Further information, shewing that this act of the indendant was unauthorised, has strengthened our expectation that it will be corrected.

"In order, however, to provide against the hazards which beset our interests and peace in that quarter, I have determined, with the approbation of the senate to send James Munroe, late governor of Virginia, with full powers to him and our ministers in France and Spain, to enter with those governments into such arrangements as may effectually secure our rights and interests in the Mississippi, and in the country eastward of that. He is now here and will depart immediately. In the mean time, knowing how important it is that the obstructions shall be removed in time for the produce which will begin to descend the river in February, the Spanish Minister has at our request, reiterated his interposition with the Intendant of New-Orleans.

"I enclose you a resolution of the House of Representatives on this subject, which, with the measures taken by the executive, will, I hope, furnish new grounds for the confidence which the legislature of Kentucky is pleased to express in the government of the United States, and evince to them that government is equally and impartially alive to the interests of every portion of the union.

"I pray you to accept assurances of my high respect and consideration.

"TH: JEFFERSON.

"The Gov. of Kentucky.

Letter from the hon. John Breckinridge, to his friend near Frankfort.

"Washington, 20th Jan. 1803.

"DEAR SIR,

The conduct of the Intendant at New-Orleans has excited considerable sensibility here, and it would have been much greater had it not been pretty generally believed that the measure was not authorized by the court of Spain. Measures for redress were taken very early by the President: and the Spanish Minister here, believing that the intendant was acting without authority, sent a pilot boat to Orleans with dispatches, hoping that by his interposition, things would be reinstated in their former condition.

"The subject was also taken up by the house of representatives, and after sundry discussions, in all of which there appeared but one sentiment as to our natural as well as stipulated right to the navigation of the Mississippi, and of the unalterable determination of the general government to support it, the subjoined resolution was adopted.

[The resolution was published in a former paper.]

"The conduct, however, of the Intendant in this instance, has plainly manifested, that from the present arrangements we cannot promise to our commerce much prosperity or duration. Indeed I am satisfied that the tranquility of the union will be liable to such frequent interruption, that it cannot be long preserved in such a state of things, and I am equally satisfied, that the western commerce cannot prosper.—Under these impressions, I was much gratified at the appointment of Mr. Monroe, as Minister Plenipotentiary to the courts of France and Spain, who in conjunction with our Ministers resident there, will, I trust, be able to accomplish an object which I conceive all important to the western states, and without which they will never rise to that prosperity and importance designed for them by nature; I mean the enlargement of our territory on the east side of the Mississippi to such an extent as will effectually secure our commerce on that river.

"Unfortunately, however, for the western people, should Orleans continue shut up against them, until the result of the mission is known, considerable injury will be sustained. But we must submit to it. It is the course which the existing state of things has induced the President to take, and which seems to promise us, ultimately, the greatest and most lasting good. Should, however, the mission prove abortive, and should our rights continue to be denied or interrupted, I have confidence that the general government will resort not only to those measures which will completely invest us with, but as completely protected us in, its enjoyment. In such a resort, there cannot fail to be an union of sentiment and of action. No American, of whatever party he may be, can hesitate in assisting to restore the violated rights of so large a portion of the community.

"I am far from thinking, therefore, that our western affairs wear an unpropitious aspect; for admitting the interdiction shall be taken off to-morrow, this government will, I trust, never consent to the continuance of a state of things so precarious and destructive as the present."

The whole commerce of near half a million of people, ought not to remain subject to the whim or avarice of foreign officers, not liable (so far as I know) to be controuled by any authority on this side the Atlantic. Some new arrangements ought to be made on this subject at least. But I look forward to arrangements of a higher and different nature, as being the probable result of this mission. I look for such an acquirement of territory on the Mississippi, at least, as will forever free our commerce from the controul of every foreign nation, and place it where it must ultimately be placed, under the exclusive direction of our government. Col. Monroe is now here, and expects to sail from New-York about the first of next month; and I think it probably we shall hear from him by midsummer.

"With my usual respect and esteem,

"I am, my dear sir,

"Your friend and serv't.

"JOHN BRECKENRIDGE."

Richmond, March 2.

At a meeting of those Citizens of Richmond who approve of the Administration of THOMAS JEFFERSON, held at the Capitol on the 28th day of February, the following resolutions were adopted, as preparatory to the celebration of the re-establishment of republicanism in the Government of the United States.

Resolved,—That the restoration of the principles of 76 which placed Thomas Jefferson in the presidential Chair, forms an epoch honorable to the disinterestedness of the people of the United States, who disentangling themselves from the influence of presidential patronage, and arriving at truth through misrepresentations almost impenetrable, produced a revolution, upon the representative system, as peaceable, as judicious and magnanimous.

Resolved, therefore—That a republican festival be prepared on the 28th of March, to celebrate that happy event.

Resolved, that a committee be appointed to contract for furnishing an entertainment—that they procure music, receive subscriptions, and correspond with such of our fellow Citizens in the adjacent counties, as may probably wish to unite with us in reviving those sensations, which it is always our interest to promote and cherish; and the following committee was appointed.—Robert Mitchell, Joseph Scott, Meriwether Jones, Samuel Pleasants, Benjamin Tate, Lewis Harvie, William Moseley, John H. Foushee, Jacob I. Cohen, William Price, Gervas Storrs, Joseph Selden, Henry L. Biscoe, and Benjamin Hatcher.

Resolved, That the Committee be directed to request William Lindsay, to deliver an Oration, adapted to the principles which gave rise the intended Festival.

Resolved,—That the committee request the favor of Captain Myers and his Company of artillerists, to assist in the celebration of the auspicious 4th of March.

SAMUEL COLEMAN, Secretary.

☞ A meeting of the Committee of Arrangement for the Festival on the 28th instant, is requested this evening at 4 o'clock, at the Eagle Tavern.
