WASHINGTON CITY,

WEDNESDAY, JULY 11.

On the ſecond inſtant MORGAN LEWIS was inducted into the office of Governor of New-York.

The Council of appointment of that ſtate have advanced James Kent, ſenior juſtice of the Supreme Court, to the office of chief juſtice, made vacant by Mr. Lewis's acceptance of the Chief Magiſtracy; and have appointed Daniel D. Tomkins, of the city of New-York, to fill the vacancy occaſioned by Judge Kent's promotion.

Norfolk, July 5.

The United States ſquadron, under command of Commodore BARRON, ſailed for the Mediterranean yeſterday.

Philadelphia.

The 28th Anniverſary of American Independence, was celebrated by the republicans of this city and county, with the ſame joy and liberality as heretofore. The feſtive parties were numerous, and the republican militia legion, never appeared more numerous or in better order.

The uſual ſalutes being fired at the dawn, the legion paraded in 3d Street, with its left on Pine ſtreet, and countermarched from the right down Spruce into 2d ſtreet, thence to Market, and up to Centre ſquare——where the whole being formed along Broad ſtreet, a ſalute from the artillery, and a triple feu de joie were fired, after which the ſeveral military corps marched to their places of entertainment. The toaſts given on the occaſion, already received, would more than occupy two papers; we ſhall give them from day to day.

Celebration of the 4th of July.

A number of citizens met at captain Vogde's inn to celebrate the day, which gave us national birth. Matthew Lawler, the mayor, and gen. Barker preſided at table. After the cloth was removed the Declaration of Independence was read, and the following toaſts were drank.

1. The day. Perpetuity to its principles, and univerſality to its triumphs.
2. The patriots of '76. They toiled for us and gave us freedom, may we never diſgrace them or ourſelves by apoſtacy from their principles.
3. The Congreſs of '76. Patriotic, undaunted and virtuous, may their ſucceſſors forever venerate and imitate their example.
4. The revolutionary armies of the United States. They fought and they conquered, may the nation be as grateful as they were triumphant.
5. The martyrs to American Independence and freedom. Periſh the wretch who would diſturb their manes by deſtroying that union which was acquired and cemented by their blood.
6. The memory of Benjamin Franklin. The ſame hand which ſnatched the lightning from heaven, called forth the electric ſpark of liberty; may it never be extinct.
7. The people. May their ſovereignty never be deſtroyed by oppreſſion, nor their will fruſtrated by intrigue.
8. The conſtitution of the United States—The wiſdom of its proviſions in rejecting the vicious and adopting the ſalutary.
9. Thomas Jefferſon, the author of the declaration of independence—May the principles of that declaration never be prophaned by thoſe who profeſs admiration for his patriotiſm and reſpect for his virtues.
10. George Clinton—His name is a terror to faction, his enemies are the enemies of the people; ſucceſs to his election.
11. Thomas M'Kean our governor. One homage to his virtues is the hypocriſy of traitors and apoſtates, who publicly flatter and privately calumniate.
12. Republican principles. May the nation's will always be the nation's law.
13. The Preſs. May it never be proſtituted to the purpoſes of private calumny, under the pretence of public diſcuſſion.
14. Agriculture, commerce, and manufactures, arts and ſciences. The pedeſtal, the ſhaft, and the Corinthian capital of our country.
15. The militia and no ſtanding armies. An armed people can never need an armed and mercenary mob to defend them.
16. The militia legion of Philadelphia. Unappalled by the prætorian bands of ariſtocracy, uncorrupted by the combinations of apoſtates.
17. Our adopted brethren of Louiſiana. Geographically connected with us, may they become as intimately allied by affection and principle.

Yeſterday being the glorious anniverſary of our national independence, a very large and reſpectable number of democratic citizens from Philadelphia city and county, met at Kennedy's Long-room, Market ſtreet, where they ſat down to an elegant and plentiful dinner provided for the occaſion.

DR. GEORGE LOGAN was choſen preſident of the day, and JONATHAN BAYARD SMITH and TENCH COXE, Eſqs. vice preſidents.

After dinner the Declaration of Independence was read by Mahlon Dickerſon, Eſq. when the following toaſts were given.

1. The 4th of July, 1776—May it be celebrated to the lateſt poſterity, as the commencement of an era the moſt glorious in the annals of freedom.
2. Thomas Jefferſon, Preſident of the United States—May he live to ſee many returns of this happy day, & to witneſs the gratitude and confidence of his countrymen.
3. Thomas M'Kean, Governor of the ſtate of Pennſylvania—The patriot of '76 and '98, too firm for the ſhafts of malice or trammels of intrigue.
4. The Heads of Departments—May they receive that reward and ſupport which their arduous ſervices merit.
5. The 4th of March, 1801—A ſecond era of American Independence, eſtabliſhed by civic virtue.
6. James Munroe and Robert R. Livingſton—They have gained for us benefits incalculable: for themſelves proportionate fame.
7. Our Brethren of Louiſiana—May the example of their fellow-citizens of the United States, teach them to appreciate the bleſſings of freedom and equal right.
8. John Dickinſon and Charles Thompſon—An aſſemblage of private virtues and public merits.
9. The memory of Waſhington and of the other Heroes, who fought and bled to eſtabliſh the independence of our country.
10. The memory of Franklin, Rittenhouſe, Hancock, and Adams—Stateſmen, who deſerve the warmeſt gratitude of their countrymen.
11. The Electoral Ticket of the ſtate, as agreed upon at Lancaſter—the point of union of the democratic intereſt.
12. The Free Citizens of the United States—May they ever have an eye to virtue and talents, in ſelecting men for their repreſentatives, and never be diſappointed in their choice.
13. True Republicaniſm—Inimical to vice and unpractiſed in intrigue.
14. The Liberty of the Preſs—May it never control the Liberties of the people.
15. The Militia, Navy, and Army of the United States.
16. The abſolute Dominion of our own Coaſts—May every attempt to encroach upon them be reſiſted with firmneſs, and repelled with vigour.
17. The American Fair—May virtue and valour ever defend them.
