Secured in the United States office a patent right of a Machine for THRESHING Wheat, Rice, Oats, and other small grains.

THIS machine in point of form and operation is different from any that has ever been invented by any other person, and is calculated either to be worked by water or horses and will thresh from 200 to 300 bushels per day, with the labor of two horses. This machine is well known upon James river in Virginia, and where it is well built it is much approved of; the expence of building will not exceed 150 DOLLARS, and the principal part of it will last until the timbers rot. It consists of knockers describing a circular motion, fixed on spokes proceeding from their centre of motion. These spokes are fixed into or pass through a shaft; around the knockers is fixed a cylender perfectly close at all sides, with an aperture at the extremity either abreast or below, sufficiently large to discharge the straw and grain; abreast of the opposite side are placed two plated conductors for the purpose in conveying the grain to the knockers, and of its progress through them the grain is knocked out; these conductors are perpendicular to each other and parallel to the radii of the cylinder. The top conductor is acted upon by weight so as to yield to any quantity of straw that passes through them, and are turned by strap wheels fixed at the opposite end. These straps are driven by the knocker shaft; the knocker shaft is driven by a vertical cogg wheel either by coggs or cond; the counter wheel is driven by a horizontal cogg wheel and waloner or spurs, to which wheel the horses move round; the velocity of these knockers ought to accelerate the velocity of the horse, at least eleven times, and to excel the motion of the conductors about 57.

SIR,

I saw this morning a publication in your paper respecting a machine for threshing, and I went to the Patent Office to enquire if a patent was granted for the invention, but found no patent had been granted; and further, that the inventor was informed that though it was said to be a very good machine, it was nevertheless not new, having been used in England fifteen years ago, or more, and a drawing of the machine was shewn to him by the writer of this, which had been made about the year 1790.
