Now that war no longer spreads over the land its heavy mantle of gloom, lovers of the chase wholeheartedly turn again to their favorite pastime. This picture shows the start, early in the morning, when man and dog alike are fresh and keenly alive. Tribune Graphic Service.

A Tale Of Hound and Double-Barrel

And here we are "in at the death." The hounds have completed their task, and the chase is over. Tribune Graphic Service.

The programme of the duck hunter is not so strenuous. But it is hungry business, all the same, and the luncheon hour is always welcome. However, it is only a hurried snatch, for time is very precious. Underwood & Underwood.

Poised for a shot at a flock "from the blind." This is a golden moment, when the pulse quickens and the eye is urged to its sharpest vigil. Underwood & Underwood.
