ILLUMINATION.

Extract of a letter from Germany.
 As to the illuminations (from your, and the English scribbles confound with our philosophers, but whom we think essentially different, we bear the same opinion. Barthelemy and Robins's books have been translated (as all English and French books are, as soon as they are known) but they are not with universal favour. With us it is not the case that all the illuminations are, it is a manœuvre of the jefuits, who wish to depreciate, and render suspected all German literature, which is diametrically opposed to their secret policy of introducing the sciences, but especially the illuminations, to the light of truth, in order that their hierarchy may be reflected in the darkness they create. But we trust, the time of chivalry and monkery is gone forever. I refer to the reviews for the public opinion. At present it is an end with Burnet, even in England, as his great patron, Waulham, is no longer in power."

Extract of a letter written by rear admiral La Croze, captain general of the island of Guadalupe, and its dependencies, to citizens. I feel, commissary of commercial relations, at Philadelphia, that the Colonies produce here at a very high price, and those of the United States at a very high value. Assure all Americans that they cannot put too much confidence in the commercial intercourse of the island of Guadalupe—nor I hope that those who shall return to the United States with rich cargoes shall give a just idea of the kindness with which we receive the Americans here.
 (Signed) "LA CROZE."

Extract of a letter from St. Croix, dated 14th ult.
 "Since I left you at New York, we have had a great change in our government. On the British fleet taking possession, I was in hopes they intended to act with moderation; but it seems it was only to find out the real state of people's property, that they might the more promptly fall upon them to deprive every person of as much as they could lay their hands on. The general has been committing an act of injustice to another for several weeks past. I suppose, he thinks he will not remain long with us, and will therefore make a puff at every thing he can, which you will see by the alteration in the course of law published in the included newspapers. You must know there are a number of relations of estates in this country, which are indebted to the King for money and supplies in unproductive seals, and I am indebted to some Dutch merchants, although the whole sum is due, these merchants have been refused to receive the annual interest. The general has condemned all this property, and to get it out of the hands of the planters, he has put in several summary orders of execution by law, to fill the pockets of the property. By the capitulation, the Danish is to be divided into two parts, excepting the apparel should be made for the use of the council of Great Britain, instead of Denmark; therefore, to fill the pockets of property would take a considerable time of legal procedure, but by this speedy method, it will be done at once, and he sages the case. To be sure, this property will fell for only what the negroes and moveables are worth, and no much who intends to remove, and no much who has not been enough interested to follow the expedition to take over the vitals of every thing in their power.

The general first sent a military guard to many of his estates, and took possession of all the produce, and sent it to town. He yesterday seized on the Bughers' corn and books, and it is reported is determined to dissolve that body, which is an establishment of the King's, as has been the case. The Danes have had the island formed of eight respectable planters, appointed by the government and the people, to make all the internal regulations of the island, to collect the duties, and to judge the general. Fuller is as much disliked here, as a commanding officer can be. Indeed the act which I send you, is as detestable as any thing recognized in the destruction of the property of the people. It judges three creatures of his own creating—neither of whom have any claim to respectability—to act in any manner he pleases. I rather imagine he will find some here who will give him no regard, but where a jury will convince him of his execrable conduct.

Speaking of the British in this place, I must not forget to do justice to Colonel Bingham, a collect of the police, who commands the troops—man, as much respected by all ranks here, as the other is disliked. He is a father to his troops, and does every thing in his power to alleviate distress, and to make things as easy as possible to the inhabitants.
 The British troops are dying very rapidly—eight or ten a day at this place, and nearly as many at West end, although they do not die under the same circumstances. It is mostly complaints of the bowels."

PROCLAMATION.

By his excellency General Fuller, commander of the island of St. Croix, &c.
 To judge Hoped, Peter Aptley and Thomas Elliot.
 By virtue of the power, and authority in me vested, I hereby order, authorize and appoint you as commissioners to act and judge in a court of commission as heretofore justified. The courts to be held at judge Hoped's house, every Tuesday and Friday, from 8 o'clock, and it is to be a detentative court; that is your sentence, or your transactions, shall not be subject to an appeal.

Every and any person who is summoned to appear, shall appear at this court of commission, not expecting any pardon, either from their rank, or otherwise, for that no exception for, shall be regarded.

Debtors shall be subject to appear at this court of commission, liable to the fine prescribed by law; and you shall be authorized to lay fact evidences; should you differ respecting the proceedings of the court, or in giving sentence, it is to be decided by a majority. No delays to be admitted.

The transactions of a court to be held in the English language, so that every person may plead his own cause.

No appeal to be made out by the court, in the same form as the reconciliation court citation, and a levy, and execution is to take place without any proceedings, as in this sentence which you give cannot be appealed. No other objections which may be made, can take place, but what respects the sheriff's transactions, which, in case of any illegality committed by him, is to be referred to me.

No appeal of any writ proceeding from your court, and take place in this sentence or judgment shall be given 24 hours after the action is taken up to a judgment.

By his excellency, Henry Campbell, Sec.
