Bossert Redbill Homes

"Not Even a Nail to Buy"
Delay the Plans for your New Home and investigate the overwhelming superiority of Redbill Home Construction. The delay will save you fully 90% of the building cost, and you'll far more than make up for lost time by adopting sectional construction.

Sectional construction has overcome the slow, inaccurate method of fitting and joining cut lumber by hand. Redbill Homes are built of standardized machine-cut sections, constructed on the principle of hollow tile—double walls separated by a lined air chamber. Sections are tightly fitted, overlapping, and bolted to one another. The result is a staunchness and resisting power otherwise found only in shipbuilding.
