Greenwich Village, New York, Is Becoming the Bohemian Centre of New York, Not the 50-Cent Table d'Hote Kind, but the Real Thing, with Brains, Baths and Clean Linen Behind It. Here Are Some Greenwich Village Bohemians as They Appeared in Their New Year's Celebration.

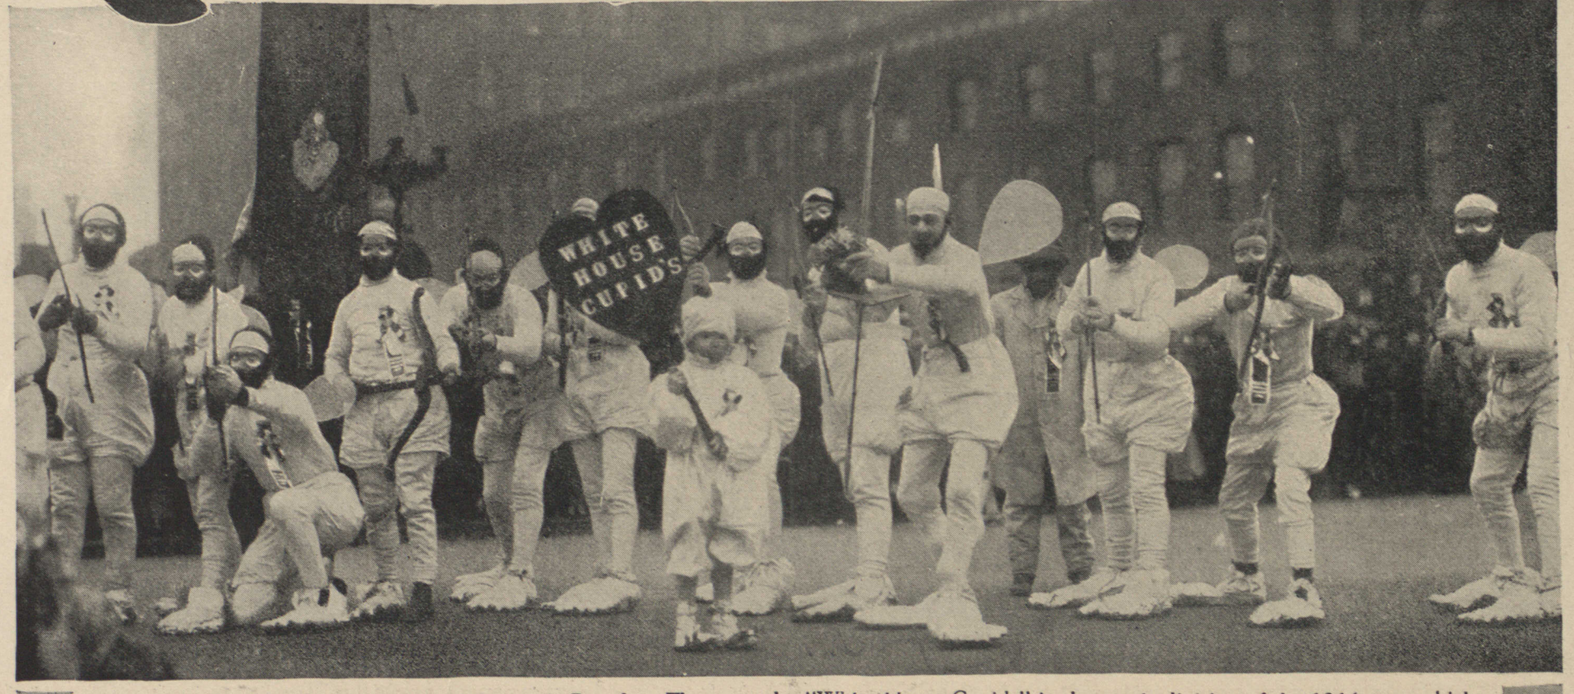
Photos by Paul Thompson.

Helen Mercer Peck spangled the black with her stars.

Pieter and Mary Mijer in costumes of their own designing.

Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Wodderwell saw each other as others saw them—only they made no remarks.

Albert and Mrs. Boni. The gentle jape was, "You look it."



Every New Year's Philadelphia has a Mummer's Parade. These are the "White House Cupids" in the comic division of the 1916 orgy which kept the Quaker City awake.

© Underwood & Underwood.

Frances Gifford in black and white, the white being all hers.