

The enthusiasm of great Paris doesn't wane. Our President has taken the town by storm. Here he is seen driving through the crowded streets with Raymond Poincaré, President of the French Republic.

© Underwood & Underwood.

These pictures take us inside the Paris White House, and we see the bed chambers occupied by President Wilson (on the right) and by Mrs. Wilson (in the photograph above).

Our overseas Executive Mansion makes of the palace of Prince Murat a point of supreme international importance. We see the prince himself in the little circle above.

Press Illustrating Service.

Mrs. Wilson driving to the Hotel de Ville to hear her husband proclaimed a "citizen of Paris."

© Committee on Public Information.

The President and Mrs. Wilson leaving the reception to Marshal Joffre at the French Academy, Paris.

© Committee on Public Information.