"How's this for a picture?"

THE father proudly shows the latest picture of his family to his friends, and glows under their warm compliments. "You are to be congratulated," they say; "such beautiful children—they take after their mother and father." "And that's nice photography too," is a frequent comment, and the father is further pleased by the appreciation of his judgment in selecting a good photographer.

For the "best little group of people on earth" there is nothing too good. Fine photography gives an added charm.
