

Left—On his way to the round-up. The prince seems perfectly at home in the saddle.

H. R. H. the Prince of Wales turns cowboy for a day and enjoys all the thrills of ranching on Mr. George Lane's extensive range at Pekisko, Alberta, Canada.

Right—The prince is an interested spectator during a cattle branding operation.

Judge Alton B. Parker (he returned to New York last Monday on the Baltic) makes the address at the unveiling of Barnard's statue of Abraham Lincoln in Peatt Field Park, Manchester, England.

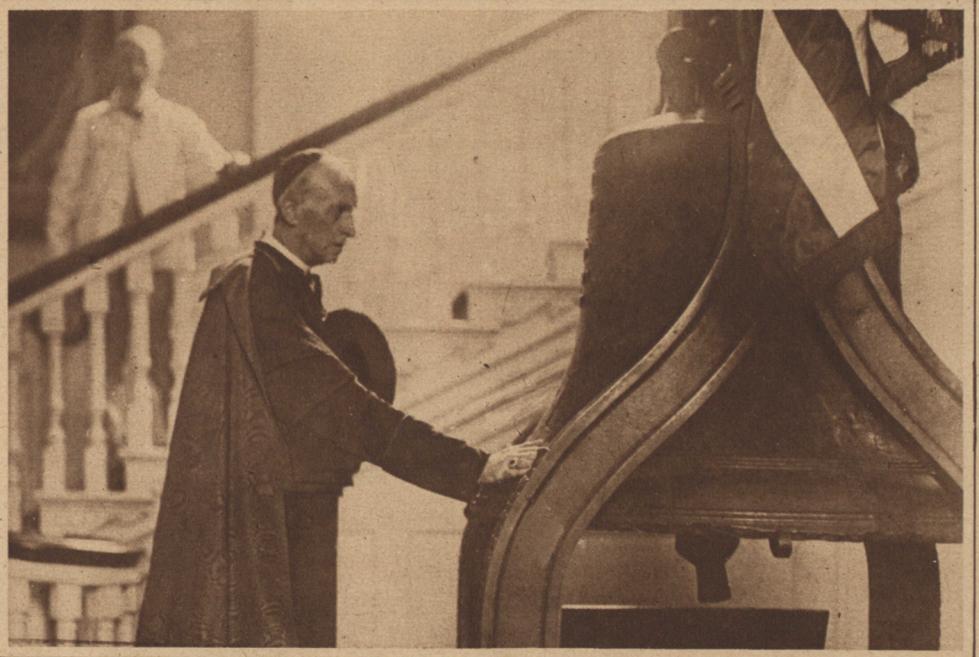

Latest picture to be received of Herr Friedrich Ebert, President of Germany. Son of a tailor, Ebert started out in life as a harnessmaker.

"Brownie," mascot of the NC-4, who is accompanying Commander Read's famous transatlantic seaplane on its recruiting tour of the country's seaports.

The hero of Palestine, Field Marshal Lord Allenby, visits his aged mother on his return to England. Lady Allenby (left) holds one of the many floral offerings presented to her soldier husband. Bombardier Wells, famous British prize fighter, in training for an effort to win back the championship. His daughter Beryl is an able assistant.

Belgium's heroic prelate, Cardinal Mercier, in deep reverence before the historic Liberty Bell in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, during his three day visit to the "City of Brotherly Love."

Glenn H. Curtiss's newest type of passenger-carrying plane, the Eagle, successfully tried out last week over Garden City, Mineola and Hempstead. Roland Rohlf, holder of the world's altitude record, piloted the machine, which carried a half dozen members of the Municipal Club of Brooklyn as passengers. Three 150-h.p. Curtiss motors drive the Eagle. Above is shown the roomy interior of the fuselage, with its numerous windows and comfortable wicker chairs.